교과개요

It is very rare to find a job which does not require working with other individuals. Today's workers need to understand human behaviors to work effectively with other people at work place. Also, the quality of organization is determined by the quality of human resources. It is organizational members that determine how to combine other resources. Thus, in order to be successful and effective in an organization, we need to understand human behaviors. The purpose of this course is to help students develop a fundamental understanding of human behaviors in an organization.

교과목표

We hope to accomplish the following goals: 1.Develop an understanding of the fundamental theories of Management, 2.Develop interpersonal and communication skills which help the students work with, work for, motivate, manage, and lead other people, 3.Build critical thinking skills by analyzing and critiquing organizational behavior implications of management trends, 4.Develop problem solving skills through the analysis of organizational issues and problems, and 5.Develop proposals for addressing problems based on organizational theories and findings from practice.
